Home Inventory

Home inventories are one of the most useful overlooked, underutilized investments you can make for your future. You may want to consider noting the following details in your inventory: Name of the item, condition of the item, brand and description, purchased date, cost at purchase and an estimated current value, and serial number. For special items, be sure to note antique history, manufacturer, or even the country where item was purchased. If you're still paying for something, note the debt holder, the amount of remaining debt on the item, monthly payment amount and other relevant details.
